

ABSTRACT

Feby Rizki Mutiara. 201510515157. The Relationship between Social Support and Psychological Well-Being in Early Adulthood Women Victims of Sexual Harrastment in Jakarta.

This study aimed to determine the relationship between types of social support and psychological well-being in early adulthood women victims of sexual harassment in Jakarta. The negative impact received by victims of sexy harassment can make the victim experiencing problems in functioning and carrying out daily activities. At this time, the social support received by the victims is beneficial to the psychological well-being of the victims. Social support is important for improving the psychological well-being of the victims.

The study was conducted using a quantitative correlation approach. The sampling technique used was quota sampling with a total sample of 196 women victims of sexual harassment in Jakarta. Social support was measured by using instrument made by the researcher based on the types of social support expressed by Sarafino, and psychological well-being was measured by using by using instrument made by the researcher based on the psychological well-being aspects expressed by Ryff. An analysis of the research data collected was done by using Pearson Product-Moment Correlation analysis. The results showed that there was a significant positive relationship between the types of social support and psychological well-being in early adulthood women victims of sexual abuse in Jakarta. This means the higher the social support, the higher the psychological well-being they had. Conversely, the lower the social support, the lower the psychological well-being that they had.

Keywords: social support, psychological well-being, sexual harassment.