Dear Dr. Nera Marinda Machdar,

Kindly be informed that the review of your manuscript 1532942 entitled "STOCK SELECTION USING SKEWNESS TO CONSTRUCT A PORTFOLIO AND THE EFFECTS OF VARIABLES ON PORTFOLIO RETURN" is now completed. Improvements are required according to the following comments before it can be accepted for publication.

Comment(s):

This paper aimed to investigating the effects of stock selection while constructing a portfolio using Skewness as well as the factors affecting portfolio return. Below I will discuss my main comments and suggestions, which hopefully can help the author improve the study.

1. This article could benefit from careful proofreading with a few typos/grammar errors. For example: After the the explanation will be divided into three parts in this section.
2. A thorough literature review section should be added. Literature review is a survey of the scholarly knowledge on the same topic. The author should have briefly introduced, analyzed, synthesized and critically evaluated those publications in the literature. And clearly point out the literature gap and then talk about how this research will fill such a research gap at the end of the literature review section.
3. The author mentioned that ‘Data is available from 2016 through June 2022.’Why use year 2016 as the starting point of the research?
4. By convention, the number of observations should also be added to the descriptive statistics data table for the main variables to indicate that there is no missing data problem.
5. The sources of each figure are very important, if it was cited from others we have to sourcing it properly to avoid plagiarizing problem below the figure, if it is created by the author himself, we should added: figure created by author.
6. In the table representing the regression results, the author should put the stars on the estimated coefficients to indicate the significant level.
7. In table 3, why the author put some of the SEs in parenthesis under the coefficients some not?
8. The author should have provided a robustness check section to enhance the credibility of the results.
9. Some concrete policy recommendations and suggestions that derived from the findings of this paper should be given at the end of conclusion section.
10. Given the fact that the data used was risk and return for 92 equities listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange, the author should also discuss a bit on how general are the results of this article at the end.

Please mark the corrections in Red in the updated version, and then upload it to the submission system within 5 days. A cover letter of response to the reviewer(s) is also required. The decision for the final acceptance of the paper depends on the quality of your revised version.

Thank you for your cooperation in advance.

Please feel free to ask us if you have any question.
