Reviewer A:

The study "Crisis Management in Psychology Education: The Role of Leadership" focuses on the challenges faced by psychology education during the Covid-19 pandemic and the important role of leadership in managing crises. The study discusses the importance of recognizing the challenges of learning and the use of information technology as a solution for continuous learning. The paper emphasizes the need for leaders in psychology education to have competence in crisis management and the use of a proactive approach to prioritize comfort in the learning process. Overall, this study highlights the importance of effective crisis management and leadership in psychology education during challenging times.

The first paragraph in the introduction seems to provide a general overview of education and psychology education, but it doesn't clearly introduce the main topic of the study - crisis management in psychology education. To improve this, the author could include a sentence at the end of the paragraph that connects the topic of crisis management to psychology education.

The last sentence of the introduction could be revised to more clearly state the purpose of the study and the importance of the topic of crisis management in psychology education.

Regarding "3. Leadership and Crisis Management during a Pandemic: Lesson to Learn":

The text jumps from one point to another without clear transitional sentences. Use transitional sentences to improve the coherence of the text and make it easier to follow the flow of ideas.

Grammar and spelling errors: The text has a few errors in grammar and spelling, which can make it difficult to read and understand.

Suggestions: Overall, I think the article should prioritize addressing these issues:

- What are the key skills a leader needs to have to manage a crisis like the COVID-19 pandemic?
- What can we learn from the way different countries have handled the COVID-19 pandemic in terms of leadership and crisis management?
- How is effective communication critical to crisis management during a pandemic? What are the best practices for communicating in times of crisis?
- How can leaders balance immediate crisis management needs with the need for long-term planning and preparedness for future crises?
- What are the main lessons we can learn from the COVID-19 pandemic in terms of leadership and crisis management that can be applied in other crisis situations?

If the authors believe they have addressed these points in the manuscript, please let me know in the text. If you haven't done so, please do so.

Recommendation: Revisions required

Reviewer B:

Title: "Crisis Management in Psychology Education: The Role of Leadership"

The work is exciting and well-covered. Its structure is well done, and the information is clear and detailed. However, several fixes need to be made throughout the text so that the process of publishing this article can continue:

Provide a clear objective in the last paragraph of the introduction.

All three keywords need to be replaced. Since these words are found in the work's title, it is redundant to keep them in these two places. Replace them with similar terms or with other important words commonly used in texts.

In conclusion: Emphasize the importance of continued innovation and adaptation in the field of psychology education, especially in light of ongoing technological advancements and changing societal needs.

Citations and references must be standardized to the journal's norms.

Other minor questions about spelling and grammar I suggested in the text.

Recommendation: Accept submission
